

Community Dialogue: Toward Human Rights and a People's Economy

3pm, Sunday, March 15
Unitarian Universalist Church
152 Pearl St, Burlington, VT

We live in challenging times, marked by record economic inequality, alarming racial and gender injustice, and a deepening ecological crisis. But here in Vermont, as in other places across the country and the world, inspiring movements for human rights and environmental justice are on the rise.

On March 15th, join movement leaders from a variety of local struggles for a series of panels and break-out discussions on building a common agenda for people and the planet here in Vermont. This is a family friendly event, featuring delicious food and singing. Participating organizations include the Vermont Workers' Center, Vermont Interfaith Action, Green Mountain Self-Advocates, Rising Tide Vermont, 350Vermont, Justicia Migrante/Migrant Justice, and more.

Out of respect for people with multiple chemical sensitivities, please refrain from using chemically-scented products when attending this event. Please contact us with ASL or other accessibility-related requests, and a week beforehand with childcare needs.

Questions? Contact Matt@workerscenter.org 802-373-0133